For grown-ups

The goal: your child traces straight, wavy, zigzag and looped lines from the start dot to the end, staying close to the dashes. It's the same hand control they'll use later for drawing and writing letters.

1 How to use it

- One page at a time. A few minutes is plenty.
- Trace each line with a finger first, then a chunky crayon.
- Start at the big dot and go to the star, left to right.
- Close is great. Lines don't need to be perfect.

2 Pick the right page

Easier	Pages 1–2	Straight lines and gentle waves
Core	Pages 3–5	Zigzags, steps and a mix
Stretch	Pages 6–7	Loops and every kind of line
Finish	Page 8	Draw a favourite line

3 Talk while you trace

- "Where does the bee want to go?"
- "Is this line bumpy or smooth?"
- "Which line was the trickiest? What helped?"

4 Notice the effort

Praise what they did, like "You kept going all the way to the star." Wobbly lines are part of learning, so there's no need to fix them.

5 Away from the page

Draw big lines in sand, in the air or with sidewalk chalk. Make zigzag mountains with your arms, then wavy water with your whole body.

Every child moves at their own pace. Skip ahead or go back whenever you like.
